

Current Comment

With the reconvening of Congress last Monday the spotlight of public interest centers upon the law making body and will rest there, with intermittent flashes to the other end of the Avenue when the President may have occasion to speak, probably until the June conventions come upon the stage.

In the few days before the Christmas vacation the House of Representatives, with unaccustomed promptness, passed one important measure of the President's great reconstruction program, the bill providing for an increase of 100 million dollars in the capital of the Federal Farm Loan Banks, and made good progress on a second measure, the half billion dollar government finance reconstruction credit corporation, the purpose of which is to bolster up the banks, insurance companies, railroads and different financial and industrial groups. Both of these measures are now before the Senate and will doubtless be reported out from committees at an early date with a hope that both may be enacted into law by the middle of the month. It is a good beginning.

Evidence that the Democratic leaders fully realize how thin the ice is upon which they are skating and are therefore determined to proceed cautiously, is afforded by their strategy in appointing a "Policy Committee" made up of twelve members from the House and twelve from the Senate. Before any measure can be brought up in the Democratic-controlled House it must be submitted to this Committee and receive its approval. It is a matter of political precaution with which no complaint can be made and it will be interesting to see how it works. Verbatim reports of the debates which go on behind the closed doors of the room where this Policy Committee holds its meetings would rival in interest anything likely to come out of Washington even in these exciting days. But such a report will never be published. The Committee will thresh out all its differences in executive session and the public can be admitted only to its final conclusions.

One of these final conclusions, according to forecast, will be a determination to force some sort of a tariff measure into a law making machinery at an early date, the reason alleged being that the Policy Committee finds it easier to agree upon a tariff measure than upon a taxation program. The precise nature of the proposed tariff bill has not been announced but it is understood it will not propose a general revision of the Hawley-Smoot law, perhaps will not even offer a change in any schedule, but will merely undertake to provide for an international tariff conference. If this does prove to be the nature of the bill it cannot escape the criticism that it is offered as a mere face-saving proposition. Having so bitterly denounced the Hawley-Smoot bill Democratic leaders are forced to do something about it, and so they take this way out. A

HUGH GILLIS TO BE SPEAKER AT CLUB MEETING JAN. 8

Mr. Hugh Gillis will be the artist speaker at the next meeting of the Country Woman's Club which will be on Monday, January 18.

Mr. Gillis is dramatic director of the San Jose Players and well qualified to discuss the subject for the day, "Modern Drama Since the World War". Last summer Mr. Gillis traveled in Europe where he met Bernard Shaw, Drinkwater and other playwrights. These contacts should add to the interest of his address.

Miss Helen Kalas will sing during the program hour which begins at 8 o'clock and any visitors interested in this program on drama will be welcome.

SENIOR PLAY TO BE HELD FEB. 12

The annual Senior play of the Campbell Union High school will be presented on February 12 in the grammar school auditorium. "The Boomerang" is the title for the play this year and is a delightful tale in which a love-sick young man and his worried mother, a little flirt, a girl who wants to be a nurse, a learned young doctor and various other characters play their parts with a good deal of ability. Tickets are now on sale to be exchanged for reserve seat tickets.

The cast is as follows: Gerald Sumner, doctor, Carl Graves; Budd Woodbridge, love sick boy, Franklyn Murch; Preston DeWitt, rival of Budd, Louis Morrone; Mr. Stone, doctor's patient, Louis Mammini; Emile, valet, Julius Costello; Hartley, butler, Perley Payne; Virginia, young nurse, Lois Lloyd; Grace, flirt, Ethel Kirk; Marian, doctor's sister, Katherine Hobe; Gertrude, friend of Marian, Evelyn James; Mrs. Crieghton Woodbridge, Mother of Budd, Wylda Anderson.

perfectly futile and foolish way, because everyone knows that an international conference on the tariff question would get nowhere. Three such conferences already have been held and accomplished nothing. Every nation feels itself entirely competent to frame its own tariff laws and conflicting national interests make such a thing as reciprocity impossible. It will be unfortunate if any considerable part of the time of this Congress is devoted to debate upon a measure which cannot possibly accomplish any good thing.

The Senate had a reminder of old, old days when Senator Wheeler the other day introduced a bill providing for the free coinage of silver on the basis of sixteen ounces to one of gold. And the Senator (Democrat, of Montana) actually believes in it. "This legislation would do more than all suggestions heretofore combined toward reviving, encouraging, vitalizing and resuscitating business in this country and throughout the world," he declares. And so history repeats itself in

MOTOR CYCLE RACING TO BE HELD SUNDAY

Oakland, Jan. 6.—The outstanding professional and amateur motor cycle racers will compete in 18 events Sunday afternoon, January 17 at the Oakland Speedway, East 14th street between San Leandro and Hayward. Miny Walm of Syracuse, N. Y. 1931 national champion of the two-wheeled sport, heads the list of 25 entrants, according to Linn Mathewson, general manager of the Oakland Speedway association.

However, even though Walm won the national title last year, there are three leading Pacific coast riders who, it is predicted, will give him plenty of competition. They are Jim Young of San Francisco, Marcus Kelly of Seattle and Hiram Thompson of Los Angeles. Kelly won the northwest championship in 1931 and Thompson is Southern California's leading pilot.

The delegates to the district trustee meeting of the Kiwanis clubs to be held in Fresno Saturday are Ira Abbott, Guy Farley, Roy Archibald, Lloyd Berry and George Robson.

reviving the old issue upon which William Jennings Bryan fought two campaigns—and doubtless will repeat itself in the disposal that will be made of this issue.

Various bills for the extension of Federal aid to the unemployed have been introduced and committees will begin hearings upon them immediately. The most extravagant of these bills comes from Senator LaFollette, of Wisconsin who asks for an appropriation of 5½ billion dollars. While all of these bills provide for the utilization of the funds appropriated through employment on public works or something of the sort, it is generally recognized that in effect they commit the government to a dole system and it is not believed favorable action will be taken upon any of them.

The Santa Clara Valley Athletic league opened the 1932 basketball season last Friday night and the Campbell cagers played Mountain View at Mountain View with the 130s the only team winning in the match. The score was 29 to 19. This Friday at the local gymnasium the Campbell lads will play Live Oak. The game will start at 7:30 with the 130s starting the play. They promise to be good lively games and well worth seeing.

Opera Sensation of 1931 Faces Big Year

LILY PONS, youthful coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, confounded Signor Gatti-Casazza, impresario of that company, when her performance last year forced that dynamic music master to revise his statement that new singers did not exist. Then she was signed for five years with the opera; concert organizations asked for her name on the dotted line, and radio saw in her a bright new star for coast-to-coast broadcasts. She will be one of the important guest singers on a forthcoming General Electric Sunday "twilight program."

PHONE ALMANAC AIDS HISTORY HELPLESS DADS

Dad will have to brush up this year on George Washington, in order to answer Junior's questions, for 1932 is the 200th year since Washington was born.

But manager Miss M. Curran, of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company says that Dad will find what he used to know, and many unusual facts besides, in the 1932 Telephone Almanac which will aid in successfully meeting cross-examination. Copies of this unique Bell System publication are available, without charge, at the telephone company business office, 35 E. Campbell avenue.

"The memories of lessons taught in the little red school house have become a little rusty for most of us," said Miss Curran. "The scores of facts which concern George Washington contained in the telephone almanac will enable parents to maintain their status as fountain-heads of information."

"The telephone almanac, an annual publication, is unique in its field, and fosters a tradition established by Benjamin Franklin just 200 years ago. 'Poor Richard's Almanack' was first published in 1732, the year of Washington's birth. Its homely philosophy had a profound effect on American social and business life," said Miss Curran.

forwards, Murty, Shank, Pryor, Clute, Kiperash, Bollinger and Eddlemon; centers, Robinson, Pryor, MacFarlane and McCay; guards, Persico, Ruscigno, Anderson, Carlisle, Martin, Payne and Andrews. In both teams the first men mentioned in the positions will begin in the games.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

United States Warns Japan It Is Violating the Nine-Power Treaty—President Prods Congress on Relief Measures.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

JAPAN has been formally notified that in the opinion of the American government she is violating the nine-power treaty by her actions in Manchuria. The United States does not recognize as legal Japan's occupation of the country. China and Japan are both warned that Washington will not recognize any agreement entered into by them which violates the open-door pact or the Kellogg anti-war treaty.

These statements were forwarded in identical notes to Tokyo and Nanking by Secretary of State Stimson, who immediately thereafter called in the diplomatic representatives of the signatories to the nine-power pact and told them what he had done. It was expected that Great Britain and some of the other powers would follow the American example. Mr. Stimson declined to say what could or would be done if Japan persists in violations of the treaty. The nine-power pact calls for no other action than "full and frank communication between the contracting powers concerned" in case of an emergency. The Kellogg treaty calls for no military or diplomatic steps.

The Japanese forces in Manchuria moved on southward from Chin-chow and occupied Shanhaikwan, the gateway to China, situated where the Great Wall reaches the coast. Their garrison in Tientsin was heavily increased and a "grand review" was held there.

Earlier in the week the Washington administration was aroused by an attack made on American Consul Culver B. Chamberlain by Japanese soldiers in Mukden. Formal protest brought an apology from the Japanese ambassador in Washington but Mr. Stimson let him know that the incident would not be considered closed until the offenders had been adequately punished. For this affair, as for all its actions in Manchuria, the Japanese government sought to put forward excuses and explanations which in most cases appear to be ready made to fit the circumstances.

On Friday a bomb was hurled in Tokyo by a young Korean in an effort to assassinate Emperor Hirohito. It exploded near the carriage preceding that occupied by the ruler, and no one was injured.

GREAT disturbance in the French government was caused by the death of Andre Maginot, minister of war, and it appeared certain there would be changes in the cabinet. Some observers expected Briand would be forced out and that Tardieu would succeed him as foreign minister. Maginot was responsible for the government's strong military attitude and originated the plan for a great chain of fortresses along the eastern border.

WITH President Hoover appealing to congress for speedy and nonpartisan action on the relief measure he has recommended, the Democrats began to push forward the first of their party bills of major importance. This is a tariff bill not designed to alter existing rates but to deprive the Chief Executive of his control over the flexible provisions of the present act. It also calls on the President to summon an international conference for the reduction of tariff rates.

This measure, which was introduced by Representative James W. Collier of Mississippi, Democratic chairman of the house ways and means committee, had the approval of the congressional Democratic joint policy committee. It would take away the power now enjoyed by the President to accept or reject, as he alone sees fit, the recommendations made by the tariff commission, under the flexible provisions of the Smoot-Hawley act. It would give congress the final right to determine whether or not the commission's findings justify a change in rates.

Supported by all the Democrats and probably some of the independent Republicans, this bill, it was admitted, had a good chance to get through both houses but not with a sufficient margin to pass it over the Presidential veto that might be expected.

MR. HOOVER'S plea for quick action on relief bills was made in a special message. The measure for which he spoke especially included the one already passed by the house to increase the capitalization of the federal land bank system by a sum between $100,000,000 and $125,000,000; the bill to create a federally financed $500,000,000 "reconstruction finance corporation"; the bill to create a home loan discount system capitalized by the government at a minimum of $150,000,000; and a bill to liberalize the rediscount provisions of the federal reserve system.

The President also urged a plan to release the assets of closed banks, a revision of the transportation act with a view to strengthening the value of railroad bonds, and a revision of the banking laws, the better to protect depositors.

Senate and house leaders of both parties promised to aid the President's proposals. The senate started relief affairs in its own way by passing Senator Capper's resolution authorizing the distribution to the needy of 40,000,000 bushels of stabilization wheat held by the farm board, through the administration of the American Red Cross and other organizations. The farm board is to be credited with the market price of wheat at the time of the transaction.

John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, said that that organization would gladly undertake the distribution, and later before the house committee on agriculture he not only spoke in favor of this bill, but encouraged the introduction of a bill to treat farm board cotton in the same fashion, so that cotton goods may be donated to those lacking clothing. Mr. Payne was explicit on one point. He wanted the exact duties of the Red Cross as distributing agent definitely set out in the bill. Out of his experience, he said, the Red Cross would be criticized in whatever it did and he wished no loopholes left in the bill.

COULD William Jennings Bryan have returned to earth and been present at the senate chamber the other day he would have been immensely gratified, for the old "16 to 1" issue which nearly carried him into the White House years ago was revived by Senator Burton K. Wheeler. That a Democrat from Montana introduced a bill providing for the free coinage of silver on the basis of 16 ounces to 1 of gold, which was exactly what Mr. Bryan sought so long to bring about.

"This legislation would do more than all suggestions heretofore combined towards reviving, encouraging, vitalizing and resuscitating business in this country and throughout the world," Wheeler said.

"Contentment, happiness and lucrative occupation would be substituted for discontentment, despair, with their inevitable resultant tragedies to follow."

SENATOR BORAH sometimes disregards utterly the wrath of his colleagues, and he did this when he introduced three bills designed to effect economies in government expenditures. The first of these measures would reduce the salaries of the federal farm board members from $12,000 to $9,600 a year. It would further place a $15,000 maximum on any annual salary connected with the board, a provision aimed at the counsel who now receives $20,000.

The second bill strikes at the dearly beloved twenty cent mileage prerogative of congressional and certain other governmental officers.

The third bill cuts the salary of the Vice President from $15,000 a year to $10,000; and does the same thing for the members of the President's cabinet. It also reduces the $10,000 per annum paid to senators and representatives to $8,000.

It was stated at the White House that President Hoover did not believe this federal salary cut movement would come close to passage in congress and that if it were seriously considered he would oppose it. His opinion is that it would result in loss of efficiency and morale and also that it would set a bad example for the country. All through the depression period the President has urged business and industry not to reduce wages except as a last resort.

DEMOCRATS and wets both rejoiced over the result of the election in New Hampshire to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Fletcher Hale, dry Republican. In a normally Republican district William N. Rogers, former congressman, who is a wet Democrat, was victorious over former Gov. John Bartlett by about 3,000 votes. Rogers' chief issue in the campaign was unemployment and industrial depression.

The Democrats in the house now number 220, while the Republicans have 214 and the Farmer-Laborites one.

COMMUNIST activities in the United States have been a specialty of Hamilton Fish, Jr., congressman from New York, and the recent tragedy in Easton, Pa., when mail clerks were killed by a bomb mailed to an Italian, together with the discovery of bombs in the mail in other localities gave him a new opportunity. He introduced in the house a resolution calling for a congressional inquiry into the activities of Fascists and anti-Fascists in this country. The "diabolical bomb conspiracy," he said, had been charged to both these factions of our Italian residents and he urged the investigation "for the purpose of putting an end to all such activities which tend to create discord with a friendly nation and have caused enmities, riots and murders among our own people."

Hamilton Fish, Jr.

JOHN J. RASKOB, chairman of the Democratic national committee, fearing a split between the wet and dry wings of the party, backed down a bit from his dripping wet attitude. He made public a letter he sent to members of the national committee recommending the adoption of a home rule plank by the coming national convention. He advocates the submission of an amendment to the Eighteenth amendment which would give control of the liquor traffic to each individual state.

Mr. Raskob also asked that the result of his questionnaire to contributors to the last national campaign be referred to the convention. More than 25,000 replies to the questionnaires were received and of these 93 per cent favored the resubmission of the Eighteenth amendment to the people. Seventy-nine per cent were for outright repeal of prohibition.

MAHATMA GANDHI is in prison at Poona, many other leaders of the Indian Nationalists are under arrest and troops are on their way from England to reinforce those in India; but it is evident the British government is going to have a terribly hard time suppressing the revolt of the natives. Viceroy Lord Willingdon put into effect various emergency decrees, outlawing the All-India Congress party, forbidding contributions to its funds and prohibiting demonstrations and peaceful picketing.

From his cell Gandhi issued an appeal to the Christians of India to support the independence movement, to adopt the spinning wheel and home-spun garments and to renounce drink. Native women were leading most of the anti-British demonstrations, while the men carried on the fight against payment of taxes and manufactured illicit salt. The boycott of British goods of all kinds spread rapidly. Gandhi told his followers that "the boycott is the weapon that will bring England to her knees."

CHARLES G. DAWES, ambassador to Great Britain, on coming home from London the other day took occasion to deny forcibly the rumor that he was a possible candidate for the Republican nomination for President, a sort of last hope of those who do not favor the renomination of Mr. Hoover. General Dawes said he was in Washington solely for the purpose of consulting with the President concerning the course to be followed by the American delegation to the coming disarmament conference, of which delegation he is to be the head.

C. G. Dawes

After General Dawes and the other American delegates had breakfast with President Hoover it was announced at the White House that the United States does not intend to play a leading role at the conference. Having cut the American military establishment to the bone in the name of economy, no further cuts along this line should be expected, this administration spokesman said. It was also pointed out that as the United States now ranked fifteenth among the nations in military power, there was little likelihood that this country would be asked to make any real cuts.

NOT only Chicago but mankind is much the poorer for the death of Julius Rosenwald, philanthropist and capitalist, who passed away after two years of illness. He had made great sums of money in merchandising and devoted most of his fortune to benefactions designed to encourage thrift and to eradicate racial and religious prejudice.

The Wicked Flea
A humanitarian from Hartford, who wished to insure his dog's comfort, sent a hurry-up message to the Meriden Journal. "Kindly tell me," he urged, "as soon as you can, what is good for fleas?" "That depends," stalled the editor. "What's the matter with the fleas?"

fatal accidents are resulting in California from the failure of motorists to slow down when approaching intersections or when going through incorporated towns and cities, E. Raymond Cato, chief of the California Highway patrol, today instructed his men to "bear down" on all such violators.

There is a general disregard of speed limit zone signs by motorists traveling on the state highways that pass through incorporated towns, the chief said.

Officers were instructed to post themselves where they may observe such signs to see that the law is obeyed and to give co-operation to the police of such communities in rounding up offenders.

"These signs mean what they say or they would not be there," said Cato. "The same thing applies to the 45-mile speed signs placed out on the open highway. Don't forget that 45 miles an hour is the legal speed limit in California and that you can be arrested for traveling above that speed."

"Too many motorists have a habit of rushing through small towns along the highways at the same rate of speed at which they travel on the open road. Many others seem to think they have complied with the law if they slow down to 35 or 40 miles an hour. This practice is unlawful and decidedly dangerous."

Masterpiece of Nature That Defies Puny Man

In 1890 the owners of a tract of redwood timber near Porterville, Calif., attempted to fell a giant redwood tree, but failed. The tree was sawed through from both sides at an angle and although cut through was held as in a vise. A little Irish lum-berjack used a charge of black powder in the cut, but all that the charge did was to move the sawed end of the tree an inch in its resting place. Had dynamite been available at the time the tree would not have been sawed. Men at that time were engaged in the forests cutting stakes for use in fencing in the valleys. Hitching posts were turned out and were in great demand in front of all business places in the towns of the treeless valleys of California. But the tree that refused to fall, though cut entirely through, still stands, dead of course, in the dense forest near Porterville.

Maple Tree Sap

The movement of sap in the maple tree is described generally as follows: It is the watery solution which circulates through the vascular tissue in woody plants. The ascending current consists of the water of imbibition in which are dissolved various salts obtained from the earth. This so-called crude sap passes through the xylem portion of the vascular bundles to the chlorophyll-containing tissues, the leaves in most plants, where the surplus water is transpired into newly formed carbohydrates and protoids through the phloem or sieve tissue to the parts of the plant which may require them, the descending current often being called elaborated sap. From this it will be seen that the sap taken in tapping a tree is the type of sap which has already formed the carbohydrates and protoids and is therefore largely from the descending or elaborated sap.

Poetic Justice

"Arabs dearly love what we call poetic justice," said Lowell Thomas, the writer-lecturer. "They tell the story of an Arab who stole a horse and sent his son to market to sell it. On the way to market the son was himself robbed of the horse and forced to return to his father empty-handed.
"Ah!" exclaimed the old man when his son walked into camp. I see thou hast sold the horse. How much did it bring?
"Father," said the son disconsolately, "it brought the same price for which thou thyself didst buy it."

Needle Long in Heart

That Edward Sell, forty-five, of Hayes, England, carried a needle in his heart for more than four weeks was revealed by X-rays. Sell was working on an airplane when a needle was driven into his breast. It was considered too dangerous at the time to operate. Four weeks later an operation was tried, but had to be stopped before the needle was removed. Sell died soon afterward, and a needle two inches long was found in the left ventricle of his heart.

Not Through

Little Bobbie went to the school for the first time. When he came home in the afternoon all tired and apparently disgusted his grandfather said:
"Well, well, my little man! What did you learn today?"
"Nothing, Grandpop," answered Bobbie, with a sigh, "and I have to go back again tomorrow."

Young People's League

The Epworth league got its name from the name of the town in Lincolnshire, England, which was the birthplace of John Wesley, founder of Methodism. The Epworth league was born in Cleveland, Ohio, in May, 1889, at a meeting of representatives of various young people's societies.

P. T. A. Program Given By Glee Club Of Grammar School

Mrs. S. N. Hedgard presided over the regular meeting of the grammar school P. T. A. held last Tuesday afternoon.

The school glee club under the direction of Miss Cornell, gave a very entertaining musical program. The numbers sang were "California Lullaby" by girls of the upper grades; "Bells of the Sea" by boys of the upper grades;
"By the Mississippi" and
"Out Where the West Begins" by girls and boys of the upper grades. Jimmy Rambo of the fourth grade played two piano solos and Sam Teressi of the fourth grade gave a reading on birds.

An announcement of importance was made by Mrs.
Hedgard. The meeting to be held Tuesday, February 2 will be in the form of a Colonial tea in honor of Founder's Day. Mrs. Mary Wisdom, district president, will be the guest of honor.

A card party is being arranged to be held soon to help swell the school lunch fund.

Refreshments were served by the third grade teachers and mothers of the pupils.

England's Virgin Queen as Frenchman Saw Her

In November, 1597, an ambassador extraordinary from Henry IV of France to Elizabeth of England was put ashore at Dover. Of his interviews with the queen, her appearance, her clothes, her demeanor, what she said, he gave the fullest account. This is his pen portrait:

"She was strangely attired in a dress of silver cloth, white and crimson, or silver gauze as they call it. This dress had slashed sleeves lined with red taffeta, and was girt about with other little sleeves that hung down to the ground, which she was forever twisting and untwist-ing. She kept the front of her dress open, so that one could see the whole of her bosom. . . . As for her face, it is and appears to be very aged. It is long and thin, and her teeth are very yellow and unequal, compared to what they were formerly, so they say, and on the left side less than on the right.
Many of them are missing, so that one cannot understand her easily when she speaks quickly. Her figure is fair and tall and graceful in whatever she does; so far as may be she keeps her dignity, yet humbly and graciously withal."

H. C. Smith.

At this meeting officers were elected for the year 1932. They were, deacon for four years, H. C. Hutton; trustee for three years, H. S.
Young; treasurer, Roy Archibald; financial secretary, W.
H. Stray; clerk, Lillie F. shaw; deconesses, Miss Han-cie Naylor, Mrs. Mary Lanphear, Mrs. F. E. Duncan; music committee, R. Y. Maxon, Mrs. W. Grattan, David Saunders; nominating committee, R. Y. Maxon, Mrs. H.
C. Smith and Marshall Ross.

Electric brooders raise healthier chicks

HAVE you ever bought or hatched a brood of fine pedigree chicks that became drowsy and sick after a day or so?
No doubt you have. You lost chicks as well as money.

Black Heat Brooder Heating elements beneath the hover of this brooder are black and non-glowing. Curtains around the bottom conserve heat. A small electric lamp attracts the baby chicks to the brooder at night.

Radiant Brooder
Radiant brooders conserve heat by means of a tall hover. Glowing coils, beneath the hover top, attract the baby chicks to the brooder at night. A reflector, above the coils, throws heat rays to the floor.

The electric brooder raises strong, healthy chicks. That is because electric heat can be closely and automatically controlled. Poultrymen who use the electric brooder save time, labor and money. Fuel storage and handling problems are eliminated.

Modern electric brooders are now constructed to create air currents which ventilate the brooder and remove the injurious carbon dioxide and moisture exhaled by growing chicks.
Fresh, warm air keeps the baby chicks in a strong, healthy condition.

If you want to improve and simplify your brooding operations, it will be worth your while to use Electric Brooders. Without cost or obligation, our Rural Power Representative will be glad to call on you and give you further information. You may get in touch with him through our nearest office.
